BUT THE PIRATE SHIP CRYSTAL IS DELIVERED SAFE IN PORT.

The Pursuit Had Become Ton Hot for the Merry Sen Rover who Kidnapped Dep-nty Sherif Junbar, So He Docked His Craft and Skipped-Crew Gone, Too. The sixty-year-old brick schooner Crystal, which has been off on a three weeks' debauch under the command of her able but convivial skipper. Cant. Patrick Ward, is now lving peacefully at her owner's dock in Tompkinsville. The present whereabouts of the pirate chief and his three merry men is a mystery High McRoberts, the owner, has been looking for the Crystal ever since the Thursday before Christmas. She was at that time carrying bricks from a Jersey town to 135th street, North River. Capt. Ward worked her on shares. Mr. McHoberta's share had not been appreciable for some time, and he resolved to look the Crystal 1805 and was liable to confiscation if a revenue cutter should run across her. Furthermore, he had an offer for the boat, and thought of selling her. When the Crystal showed up at 135th street on Dec. 20, Mr. McRoberts made a trip to New York and told the skipper to bring the schooner back to Tompkinsville and get the license renewed.

"All right, my hearty," replied Capt. Ward. Then he told the owner that business was all right and that his share of the money would be paid over on the return to Staten Island. He had $300 on hand then. Mr. McRoberts went back porter yesterday that he hadn't seen the Captain since.

Now, $300 will buy a very large allowance of rum, even for Capt. Ward and his three men, so that there may still be some of the money left.

Mr. McRoberta, however, is satisfied with getting the schooner back, and is willing to let his iso go.

For about two weeks the Crystal cruised about the Sound in a maudlin sort of way, putting in here and there for liquid supplies. Last Friday she turned up in New London, and it was there that she was seized for a $13 debt for repairs and put in the custody of E. D. Dunbar, deputy shoriff. Mr. McRoberts was notified, and sent a crew to pay the bill and bring the vessel back. When they got to New London they settled the claim, and Sheriff Balley went with them to the docks to call off Mr. Dunbar. But the Crystal was nowhere to be found. It has transpired since that Capt. Ward, evidently regarding himself as a pirate king and not amenable to the law, informed the deputy sheriff that he was about to begin a cruise and invited the latter to go ashore, jump overboard, or accompany the buccaneers. Mr. Dunbar chose the latter course.

Mr. McRoberts beard no more of the Cryftal until he received Mr. Dunbar's postal card from College Point on Friday saying she was there. He went up the next day, but once more the schooner had disappeared, and he could imagine Capt. Ward chuckling and crying "Folled again," as the foam dashed over the lee scuppers and the assistant cook served more hot grog.

When the Crystal put in at Gowanus Creek on search of her. He reached Gowanus Creek at A. M., only to learn that the Crystal had sailed at 6:50. As she passed out the skipper of a hearby schooner sang out:

"Hello, on board the Crystal!"

"On board the Crystal be blanked!" was the reply in a thick and husky voice. "You go to blank!"

That was the extent of the information that Mr. McRoberts was able to glean at the creek. He bunted around the bay for a while, and then started for Jersey. When he got to Water Breet he decided to communicate with his Tompkinaville coal yard. The joyful news came over the wire that the Crystal had been returned to her dock at half past nine by two tough-looking men, who would not say who they were or where they came from. Capt. Ward had left the vessel in Gowanus Bay, they said, and asked them to return her to Mr. McRoberts.

The two men were anxious to get away, evidently fearing arrest. Nothing more could be get out of them and nobody knows what became of them. Mr. McRoberts intends to lay the Crystal up for the winter, and when she starts out again she will undoubtedly have a new aking.

Sheriff Balley of New London is anxious to secure the extradition of the Captain and crew.

AN ITALIAN BANKER MISSING.

Likewise the Funds Deposited with Him by His Thrifty Countrymen.

BUFFALO, Jan. 11.-P. Acconcia, an Italian banker, who opened a money exchange and banking business at 112 Exchange street about two months ago, is missing, and it is believed that he has fled with the money belonging to depositors, amounting to about $8,000. Acconcia came here from New York and represented that he was wealthy, and was also backed by a big banking concern of the metropolis. He opened a bank, hired two bookkeepers, put in an mposing looking safe, and started in to do business. He received money from many Italians ere to send by draft to their relatives in Italy, but from present advices it seems that little, if any, of the money or drafts were ever sent.

Accoucia left here last Friday, ostensibly for Accounts left here last Friday, oscenably for New York, saying he would be back in two days. His failure to return gave rise to the relient that he had fled, and this morning his bank has besieged by scores of Italians demanding the return of their money. The bookkeepers could only say that they had no funds, but that Accounts would soon be back and then all would be well. Many of the Italians showed letters from relatives at home stating that no remittances had been received, though the money for them had been entrusted to Accounts. WIDENING COLLEGE PLACE.

The Preliminary Work of Bemelitien Re-aun Yesterday and Will Last Forty Bays.

Contractors began yesterday the work of tearing down the fronts of buildings for the extension and widening of College place. The property holders were notified by the Department of Public Works that they would have forty days in which to make the alterations necessitated by the new thoroughfare. Many of the buildings along the line of the widening are vacant, and the tenants of the remaining ones were busy yesterday moving out to make room for the wholesale demolition which will be well on its way in a few days.

The widening and extension of College place has been in contemplation for twenty-five years, but it was not until the Board of Street Opening took it up five years ago that any real progress was made. They met with difficulty at the outset. The Commissioners of Estimate reported on the plan, but their report was not accepted on the ground that the principle of awards and on the plan, but their report was not accepted on the ground that the principle of awards and assessments was erronsous. They made a second report, which was finally accepted on May S. 1894. To the forty-three property holders on College place $1,431,693.17 was awarded. The great difficulty in securing the property was in the fact that a good deal of the real estate was held by the Trinity and Columbia College corporations and others, who leased the ground to their tenants. The Board had a difficult task in apportioning the awards between the tenants and holders. The Commission expended something like $30.000 for its own use.

Yesterday morning a gang of men began to tear down the five-story marble-front building at 58 Barclay street, lately occupied by Hall & Rucker. This building will be torn down completely, as it is in the line of the extension. The extension will cut an eighty-foot swath through the block between Barclay and Vesey streets, wiping out the tunnel through which the Sixth avenue and Eighth avenue cars now run. The extension will also necessitate the lopping off of forty-six feet from the southeast corner of Greenwich and Vesey streets, gradually decreasing to ten feet at Fulton street. Then, beginning with a ten-foot slice on the southwest corner of Fulton street, the extension widens to fity-eight feet at Dey street. The fronts of the buildings on College place from Chambers street to Barclay street will be moved back an average of twenty-five feet. The tenants are required to make the necessary alterations out of their own purses, provision having been made for this in new fronts and sidewalks, and the city will pave the streets.

It is presumed that College place will retain its name, although this may give rise to a complication, as the plan calls for the widening and extension of College place, when in reality Greenwich street is also widened from Vesey to Dey street. Whether this will be known as College place or not remains to be seen. The building on the northwest corner of Park place and College place was also attacked yesterday, and its front will be removed. For the next forty days fogs of dust and pulverized cement are predicted in the vicinity of College place.

Amendments to Be Offered at the National Guard Convention.

At the annual convention of the National Guard Association, to be held next week in Albany, Major Charles H. Luscomb of the Thirteenth Regiment, in Brooklyn, intends to offer several amendments to the code.

Section 30 at present closes as follows: "The ficers composing the staff of the Commanderin-Chief, their assistants, and the staff officers of divisions and brigades, shall constitute the general staff of the State." It is proposed to add the following: "And, except in the case of the Judge Advocate-General and the Surgeon-General and their assistants, must be selected from commissioned officers in the National Guard, active, retired, or super-numerary, or the army of the United States, and of a grade no lower than Captain."

It is proposed to amend section 31 by adding at the end of the section:

"These staff officers, excepting the Judge Ad-vocate and the Surgeon, must be selected from vocate and the Surgeon, must be selected from commissioned officers in the National Guard of the State of New York, active, retired, or super-numerary, or of the army of the United States, and of a grade not lower than Captain, except that any commissioned officer may be appointed an aid-de-camp."

and of a grade not lower than Captain, except that any commissioned officer may be appointed an aide-de-camp."

Section 50 reads as follows:

"No commission shall hereafter be issued to any officers and the staff of the Commander-in-Chief, until the officer elected or appointed shall have passed a satisfactory examination before a Board as to his knowledge of military affairs, proportionate to the office to be held, his general knowledge, and his fitness for the service."

It is proposed to amend it by striking out the words: "Save to general officers and the staff of the Commander-in-Chief."

These amendments, it is said, have been inspired by certain objections to some of Gov. Morton's staff selections.

CURRIER MADE NO PREFERENCES. The $20,000 He Sold Out for to Be Divided Among All His Creditors.

William D. Currier, proprietor of the restaurant at 144 Fulton street, has, as THE SUN said vesterday, sold out his business to his brother. Edwin A. Currier, and gone to Denver. Lawyer D. M. Kellogg of 4 Warren street, who is attorney for W. D. Currier, said yesterday:

has been very bad, and his business affairs have been in poor shape. His liabilities are about $60,000, and his personal assets are, so far as I know, only this restaurant. On Jan. 2 his creditors met in my office and agreed to extend the time of payment of his debts, but when the day came for signing the agreement several refused to sign and others threatened attachment. Upon the advice of friends Mr. Currier decided to sell out his business and go West for his health. Last Monday he sold the restaurant property to Edwin A. Currier for $20,000, and gave the money into the hands of his largest creditor for the benefit of all. There will still be a liability of $35,000 or $40,000. His wife and children have gone to Denver with him. He will return as soon as he has regained his health."

Deputy Sheriff Lipsky received an attachment yesterday against William D. Currier, which was obtained by Cantor & Van Schalok for $400 in favor of Benjamin T. Rhoads, Jr., on a note made by Mr. Currier on Nov. 7 last, payable two months later. know, only this restaurant. On Jan. 2 his credi-

DR. MANDEVILLE HAS RESIGNED. He Opposed the Establishment of an Autitoxine Plant In Newark.

Dr. F. B. Mandeville, President of the Newark Board of Health, has tendered his resignation to Mayor Lebkuecher, and says that his desire to withdraw is entirely due to the pressure o private business. The Mayor got him to put the request in writing on Thursday night, and announced it yesterday. In his talk with the Mayor he commended the latter's action in vetoing the plan to establish an anti-toxine plant in Newark, and said that he regarded anti-toxine as merely an experiment, and also said that the city had no right to go into the manufacture of anything.

Dr. Mandeville has been connected with the Board of Health for fifteen years. He made a strong fight for the Presidency last year against Dr. Herold and won.

The Hoard of Health will probably elect his successor next week, and the chances are that Dr. Herold will be the man.

Dr. Herold is a vigorous advocate of antitoxine. He says that it is beyond the experimental stage, and, moreover, that it is worth all that it may cost if it saves the life of but one good citizen. He has been foremost in trying to establish a plant by private subscription. Mayor he commended the latter's action in Donations of warm clothing and provisions, suitably packed, will be received until Jan. 21 at the freight office of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Seventeenth and Market streets, Philadelphia. Measrs. Whitelaw Reid Buys Real Estate.

Whitelaw Reid has purchased the property on the northwest corner of Fiftieth street and Park avenue, 25x100.5, from Randolph Guggenhelmer. The price was $43,500, the property being encumbered by a mortgage of $22,000 held by the United States Trust Company. Mr. Reid in turn sold to Mr. Guggenheimer property in Sniffen court, 59 feet south of Third years to street and 159 feet west of Third avenue, for a consideration of $10,000. The deeds recording the transactions were filed yesterday.

NEW BOOKS

Brief Borlows of Important and Interesting

Mr. Gilbert Parker's story, "The Trail of the Sword" (D. Appleton & Co.), is a romance of Canada and New York in the days of Frontenac and Gov. Nicholls. It is a tale of high color, intense and glittering, but, it seems to us, somesome of his other stories which it has been our pleasure to read, gives the impression of being rather seriously concerned with his style. This, of course, is not exactly fortunate; it would be better if he could be concerned with it without giving the impression. It would benefit him, we think, if he could develop in himself a little more of the sense of humor. Very well has this been characterized as the saving sense. Its posession enables an author to relax occasionally, and serves to bring him into a more human relation with his reader. Humor is an admirable thing for style, for it keeps it down. The hero of Mr. Parker's story is a young Frenchman, wilderfrom Frontenac, and fights a series of duels for the possession of the hand of the English Governor's ward. Unhappily, the hero fails to obtain this brilliant and talkative girl. She goes to a Bostonian of rather unpleasant characteris tics, whose single advantage over the Frenchman seems to be that he is possessed of a some-what superior nervous system. We suppose ties, and that life hereabouts and in Canada in hose times was not really distinguished by quite all of the high and serious pressure that should be thankful for the changes that have occurred. Mr. Stinson Jarvis tells us in "The Ascent of Life" (Arena Publishing Company, Boston), of ome astonishing experiments in hypnotism that he once conducted. Plenty of persons, we have no doubt, will refuse to give credence to his narrative; but he can hardly be displeased at this, for to doubt his testimony is, in a manner, to bear witness to its extraordinary character. It is impossible to relate here all that Mr. Jarvis did; it will be sufficient, perhaps, to say that one thing that he did was to despatch the astral part of a hypnotized girl from this city to the Rocky Mountains, from which remote point it communicated with him, by means of the psychic ether, at considerable length, and with the utmost accuracy and intelligence. Mr. Jarvis's experiments are somewhat corroborative ported that "The Ascent of Life" is to be ciety. If it is adopted Mr. W. O. Judge and the fourteen other members of that interesting body will instruct and refresh themselve from time to time by reading opinions of this sort: "No people possess beauty which suggests any higher ideals than their own. In England, where exalted virtues, propriety of life, and love for all that is beautiful in art and literature combine to form the ideals of the refined classes, we witness a type of high-minded beauty cases of it may be seen in Boston and Canada, But one may walk for weeks in Paris withou discovering a single instance of it. Some few distinguished faces there are, but none that alogether transcend Parisian ideals. Paris is in them all. In New York it is the same. Elegance and prettiness abound in New York; but as art and literature are almost entirely absent, and as the local ideals are almost wholly confined to love of money, elegance, and pleasure, the faces of course show no more than that which is sought after." There may have ature, but with "The Ascent of Life" in the possession of the Theosophical Society we do not see how this charge can be maintained longer. Mr. Jarvis also tells us what life is. "Speaking vaguely," he says, "life is not words, but emotions." If this is so, it is not easy to see what we want of literature, anyhow. Still, we have got Mr. Jarvis's book, and we may be thankful for it, though, speaking vaguely, it would have been possible to live without it.

"American Song" is a compilation of poems with introductions and notes, by Arthur B. Sinonds (G. P. Putnam's Sons). It is a little hard at times to appreciate the compiler's sense of election and proportion. Pos is represented here by three poems; Emerson, Long-fellow, Lowell, Whittier, and Holmes each by three, and Jones Very by five. Under the head of "Preëminent Later Writers" three poets are included-Walt Whitman, Bayard Taylor, and Sidney Lanier. The division entitled "At Swords' Points" starts off appro-priately enough with Julia Ward Howe's Battle Hymn of the Republic," and it includes My Maryland" and "Dixie." But under Contemporaries," though we have George Edward Woodberry, George Parsons Lathrop, Helen Gray Cone, Clinton Scollard, and Minnie Gilmore, no room was found for Eugene Field.

and that is something that is curious enough. One of the many remarkable passages in Philip of Pokanoket; an Indian Drama," by Alfred Antoine Furman (Stettiner, Lambert & Co., New York), is the war song on page 28. which is chanted by the Wampanoags as they advance to the sound of rude drums;

The chain of peace is snapped in twain. Our sturdlest braves in ambush slain; But squaws alone will weep: Be ours to grasp the tomahawk, and through the flies of battle stalk

To bathe in vengeance deep!

Ye forest sons! arise! arise! and ring your war whoops to the skies; And where a foe shall rear his head Bequeath him to the silent dead.

The allusion to the squaws is offensive in its tone, and is not a sentiment to recommend itself to our present civilization; but the rest of the war song seems to be unobjectionable. It is plain that the Wampanoags were not a people to be trifled with, and no reader can doubt that their song meant business.

"Notes on the Year's Naval Progress," the useful annual publication of the Office of Naval Intelligence, made up to July, 1894, has just come from the Government Printing Office, after a delay of several months. Its subjects include news about foreign ships and torpedo boats, naval administration, ordnance, small arms, dynamo machinery, marine bollers, British steam machinery, recent battle ships, naval manœuvres in 1893, and the revolt in Brazil. It is full of valuable information.

Messrs. MACMILLAN & CO. have pleasure in announcing the completion of the Third Edition, revised throughout, with the addition of new chapters, of Mr. Bryce's "monumental work" on the political and social structure of the nation. The delay in the issue of the new edition has given the distinguished author the opportunity of submitting the work to thorough revision, and to its enlargement by the addition of four new and luminous chapters, dealing with vision, and to its enlargement by the addition of four new and luminous chapters, dealing with "The Home of the Nation" (an interesting chapter on the physical features of the United States, and its types of character as affected by climate, by colonization, by conquest, and by immigration); second, "The Tammany Ring" (a brief account of the Tammany Ring" (a brief account of the Negro' (a lucid narrative, treating of colored labor and its enfranchisement); and fourth, "The South Since the War" (of the changed aspects of the "Black Reit" under its new conditions, and the rise of manufactures, &c.). The revised work embraces also such emendations and corrections as were rendered necessary by the Constitutional changes that have taken place in the several States in the past five years, and by the growth of population since the previous cenaus.

A deed of conveyance of property, which was executed on July 15, 1817, and had never been filed, was yesterday recorded in the Register's office. The property described in the deed is situated in the old Ninth ward and contains six full city blocks. It was sold by Samuel Watkins, a physician, to Isaac and Michael Dyck-man, sons of Jacobus Dyckman, for $506.25. At the time of the execution of the deed it was a tract of meadow land. The property is bounded by the Harlem River, Academy erect, Sherman avenue, and Dyckman street, and is now worth about $500,000.

Vernon's Aunt.

By Mrs. EVERARD COTES (Sara Jeannette Duncan), author of " A Social Departure." " An American Girl in London," " The Simple Adventures of a Memsahib," and "A Daughter of To-day." With many Illustrations. 12mo. Cloth, $1.25.

After her strong and absorbing novel, "A Daughter of To-lay," Mrs. Cofes again demonstrates her elasticity by a return to the vivacious humor which gained her first laurels. "Vernon's Aunt" is a delicious story of contrasting types and at surd missaventures. The sparkling descriptions of the author are accompanied by most felicitous illustrations.

The Evolution of the Massachusetts Public-School System.

Historical Sketch in Six Lectures. By GEORGE H. MARTIN, A. M., Supervisor of Public Schools, Boston, Massachusetts. Vol. 20, International Education Series. 12mo. Cloth, $1.50.

The public discussion that arose from Professor Martin's papers upon the topic treated in this work will make the complete collection of the essays of much interest to a large circle of readers. In the present volume the author aims to show the evolutionary character of the public school history of the State, and to point out the lines along which the development has run, and the relation throughout to the social environment, and incidentally to illustrate the slow and irregular way by which the people under popular governments work out their own social and intellectual progress.
